As we ring in the new year, we are celebrating our 80th anniversary. And in reflecting on our past, we realized that we've always been thinking about the future.

From our earliest purpose-driven work, we've understood that our role as architects and designers goes beyond the current challenges faced by society – anticipating future needs in an increasingly connected, interdependent world. Our mission to improve the way people live, work, play, learn, research, and heal, and to help mend the relationship between the built environment and the planet, can only be achieved by always looking ahead.

We want to hear from you – what do you think is the future of design? Here's to 2015, and to the future.